General Sherman .

There are indications of jealousies in solders. Mention this paper. army circles. It is alleged by high army officers that Seceretary Lincoln eral Sherman and Secretary Lincoln. ty. On an average General Sherman gets along well with only about chalf the War Secretaries who come into power from time to time. There are points of authority at issue between the Gen eral of the Army and the head of the War Department which have never been settlee. The office which Sherman holds is a sort of fifth wheel in a wagon, and the duties and responsibilities of the position are not clearly defined. It is hard to tell where the responsibility of the Secretary of War begins and that of General of the army ends. The office will expire with the death or retirement of Sherman, and Sporting Apparatus probably will not be revived again. It was created for General Washington, 109 South Fourth Street when the army was first organized, but never existed again until recreated for Grant and then for Sherman, The officer most intimate with Secretary Lincoln is Feneral Sheridan, and the Secretary consults with him on army matters more than with General Sherman. This is not very agreeable to Sherman, as he is Sheridan's superior. It is said that Lincoln would not accept the office of Secretary of War until he had talked over the whole matter with Sheridan, who advised him strongly to take it. In connection with army matter's a cutiour story is whispered about, which may or may not be true. General part, fauored the election of Hancocg in the recent Presidential contest. This stock of much is known, and has never been Oils, disputed. The part of the story which may not be true, is that the Republicans leaders were alarmed about his attitude, and feared he would make some public electaration to the exsoldiers of the country which would influence many of them to vote for Han-ness in all its branches. Also a stock of cock, and thus endanger the cause in close States like New York and Indiana. His conduct, however, was very prudent, and his attitude neutral, and only a few of his friends here knew that he favored the election of Hancock. The story referred to, and which is doubtful, is to the effect that the Republican leaders fested that he would make some sort of an open declaration goods before baying. of his feelings, and do the cause great injury. said jokingly to a lady patient who teresting of all questions. was complaining of her centinued ill health and of his mability to cure her, "try Hop Bitters!" The lady took it in earnest and used the Bitters, from different aspirants for the suffrage of which she obtained permanent health. She now laughs at the doctor for his joke, but he is not so well pleased with it, as it cost him a good patient.

A fern grows in China which bears such a resemblance to a lamb that the English call it the Tartarian lamb fern. English call it the Tartarian lamb fern. It is covered with a thick, soft, vegetable wool, of a yell-sw color. The main stem lies flat, a short distance above the ground, while the hanging stems touching the earth look like little legs supporting it. Covered with this vegetable wool, the resemblance to a lamb is quite carrious.
